REVISION 1, 20 March 2020

General elections take place every five years. South Africa's electoral system is based on a system of proportional representation: the number of seats in the national parliament and the provincial legislatures are allocated in direct proportion to the number of votes a political party receives during the election. The WCPP consists of 42 elected Members who represent seven political parties. These are the Members of the Sixth Parliament of the Western Cape and the political parties they represent:
